Death Positive Library Resources

A note from the Death Positive Library:

This list of books, films and podcasts are recommendations from the Death Positive Library project team, our event attendees and partners. It is a constantly evolving document that we will add to on a regular basis so do get in touch if there's a resource you think we should include.

The booklist explores several genres related to death and dying. Many of these books have mortality as their main subject, but others are not exclusively about death (such as Beowulf or Hamlet). However, they all give insights into how literature has represented death across time and place. Some of these books will be therapeutic, and some will be historical, fictional, humorous or even traumatic.

Please do check the content of the books before checking them out of the library. If you are specifically looking for practical advice and help with bereavement, we advise you to look at the 'Self-Help and Grief' section.
